

What I find interesting about this structure is where all of the secondary structures of the tetramer seem to “bind” together. It also seems very firm due to all of the alpha-helices present.